

our “flipping” rights

Ivory Zuker '25 gestures negatively towards Kennedy Karbowski '24 and the crowd of anti-mask protestors at the anti-mask walkout in front of the school Sept. 1. Zucker and anti-mask protestors had multiple verbal confrontations, where both sides expressed their opinions passionately. “I always feel like people should respect each other especially when it comes to political views, so when she flipped me off it made me feel disrespected, even though I was respecting her opinion,” Karbowski said.

"crutching" for joy

Tanner Epp '23 and his teammates celebrate on the sidelines of the varsity football game against Chaparral High School at Echo Stadium on Sept 2 after Croix Burney '22 got a touchdown tying the game up 27-27 in the last 2 minutes of the game. "It felt really good to see us performing well. We just got a new coach and it was the first time seeing us be successful," Epp said. The jaguars lost the game in overtime 30-33.

breakfast bites

Corinne Stordahl '22 and Yara Haddad '22 feed each other pancakes the morning of Sept 9 at the senior pancake breakfast out in the courtyard. "Being a senior feels unreal because the last full year we had was our freshman year," Haddad said.
